Who's Who

AT THE NATIONAL
4-H CLUB
CAMP

1941

A L A B A M A

Virginia Bell, Cleburne County, has completed 16 projects during her 5 years as a 4-H Club member. These projects have been in poultry, dairy, gardening, clothing, food preservation, food preparation, home improvement, and health. Virginia has served as local leader of a 4-H Club and also as leader at a mattress center.

Julia Beth Dykes, Bullock County, has been an outstanding 4-H Club member for the past 8 years. She has completed a variety of club projects, has participated in county health contests and State judging contests, and has taken part in 24 team demonstrations, besides showing animals at the local shows and foods and clothing at State exhibits. She served as president and group captain in her local club, as vice president of the county council, and as reporter and editor of the county bulletin. Julia Beth has set out an orchard, made foundation plantings around a new home, helped make a mattress, and served as chairman of a clean-up campaign in her community.

Freeman Smith, Morgan County, is now in his fifth year as a 4-H Club member. He has taken part in a number of judging contests - both local and State - has participated in 20 general demonstrations in 4-H Clubs for community education, and has entered livestock in local shows. He has been president and vice president of his local club and chairman of the membership committee, president and secretary-treasurer of the county council, and vice president of the State 4-H council.

Comer Woodall, Dale County, during his 6 years of club membership has completed projects in peanuts, cotton, poultry, and trucking. He has given a number of demonstrations, among them forest fire prevention, quail feeding, and soil conservation. Comer was president and vice president in his local club, and reporter for the county 4-H council.

Priscilla Ellen Miller, Matanuska Valley, has been a 4-H Club member for 5 years. She has completed projects in clothing, garden, dairy, and foods, and has taken part in judging competition in her local club. She is now attending college in Wisconsin, and during the past year helped care for and show livestock at county fairs with one of the groups in that State. Priscilla has been president and secretary of her club and was chosen outstanding member of the club.

4-H Club work in Alaska.- Alaska now has a 4-H Club enrollment of 377 girls and 240 boys, a total of 617 members. At the 4-H Club round-up held at the University of Alaska, 142 members and leaders took part. 4-H achievement days were held in 14 communities with 900 people attending. Active 4-H Club leaders include 51 women and 25 men.

4-H Clubs in the southwest district include the Midnight Sun Calf Club, the North Star Calf Club, Our Gang Pig Club, and a handicraft club. Older 4-H boys with some experience in dairy work carried on a milk-testing program last year. In order to join, each member was requested to obtain permission to keep records on one herd - that of his own family, or a neighbor's - attend the club meetings, and test each cow's milk once a month during her lactation period. Owners of the herds were very much interested in the club's accomplishments. All clubs in the southwest district took home-grounds improvement as their community activity.

Two 4-H Clubs were organized in the southeastern district among the pupils in native schools. Clothing work and handicraft were of universal interest, and a foods program was initiated last year.

ARKANSAS

Troy Cox, Jackson County, is the third member of his family to take top 4-H honors in achievement and leadership in the last 6 years. In his 8 years of 4-H membership he has completed 25 demonstrations in corn, cotton, dairy, beef, and swine. Besides outstanding work in his projects, Troy has been a leader in his club, county and State, having served as vice president, president, captain leader, and play leader in his local club, president of the county 4-H council, and vice president of the State 4-H council.

Martha Lou Foreman, White County, a 4-H Club member for 6 years, has done excellent work in her projects, which include clothing, gardening and canning, poultry, foods and cookery, room improvement, household administration, farm and home accounting, swine, and dairy cow. Martha Lou has a year-round garden and saves the surplus fruits and vegetables by using the pressure cooker. Her demonstration in farm accounting was a great help to her father in keeping check on his income and expenses. Martha Lou was president of her local club for 4 years, and this year is president of the county 4-H council.

Helen Gibbons, Union County, joined the 4-H Club at her first opportunity, and has now been a member for 7 years. She has completed demonstrations in such phases of homework as gardening and canning, clothing, room improvement, household administration, poultry, foods and cookery, and home improvement. Money from her projects has been spent for clothes, books, furniture, and dairy animals. The number of offices she has held in her club and county attests to her leadership ability.

Cleoh Smith, Jefferson County, has completed 12 projects during his 6 years in 4-H Club work. Poultry, dairy, and swine have been his chief demonstrations, with corn, peanuts, and Irish potatoes as runners-up. Cleoh has been a very active member of his club, serving it as vice president for 1 year and as president for the past 5 years. He was vice president of the 4-H council 2 years and is now president. In 1939 he was awarded a college scholarship for excellence in achievement.

C A L I F O R N I A

Hazel Barnes, Tulare County, has been a 4-H Club member during the past 8 years. She has carried two major projects each year - clothing and poultry. Her poultry project consists of turkey raising, although one year she raised ducks also. She has exhibited both her sewing and her turkeys at fairs, has planned and given demonstrations, has directed skits, and has given citizenship talks before civic groups. Hazel has served her local club as president, reporter, and finance chairman, and has been secretary of the senior 4-H Club.

Walter Martin, Los Angeles County, in 8 years of 4-H Club membership has been vice president of his local club, president of the senior 4-H Club, 4-H fair superintendent for 2 years, camp director, and chairman of the feature booth exhibit for the county fair. He has raised bees, dairy cattle, and beef cattle as projects. Walter has given citizenship talks at four or five large public meetings.

Douglas Vincent Quinn, Kings County, has made a specialty of hog raising during the 8 years he has been a 4-H Club member. He has also completed projects in dairy and poultry, and acted as assistant local leader for 2 years. He has exhibited his swine projects at the State fair and Western States Junior Livestock Show, and has taken part in other club activities such as group singing, plays, skits, and readings.

Elsie Sanders, Yolo County, was enrolled in 4-H Club work 9 years ago. She has given health and clothing demonstrations, besides carrying on successful projects in clothing, swine, dairy, room improvement, and food preservation. Elsie is a member of the 4-H orchestra, in which she plays piano and bells. She is assistant director of the 4-H orchestra and she has filled practically every office in her local club.

C O L O R A D O

Perry Blach, Yuma County, finds the value of the training received in club work increasing with each passing year. He is becoming efficient in all types of farm work, but is particularly interested in breeding and raising livestock. He has done outstanding work in livestock judging, has learned to keep farm accounts, and has won several trips that have afforded him much pleasure and have done much toward furthering his education.

Esther Cooper, Logan County, began her 4-H work 6 years ago in a small sewing club. She has continued with her sewing and added other activities each year, such as cooking, home furnishing, public speaking, health practices, room improvement, and leadership. Part of her time has been spent in tours, picnics, parties, achievement days, exhibits, demonstrations, county and State club camps, and 4-H Club round-up. Esther is now leader of a sewing club composed of 12 girls, and finds she has to keep stepping to keep ahead of their questions.

Jack Fletcher, Elbert County, has been a club member since he was 10 years old. He raised 2 acres of beans as his first project, but soon became interested in livestock, in connection with which his judging work and demonstrations have been very successful. One year he and a teammate won a trip to the National Western Stock Show on their knot-tying demonstration. He has served as president, secretary, and treasurer of his club; president of student council at camp; and has held responsible offices in several other organizations. He acted as campaign manager for his sister when she was a candidate for State vice president.

Idabel Hayman, Boulder County, has completed 8 years of club work in the 4 years she has been a member. Her entire family has cooperated in and been benefited by her 4-H work. The work on her projects has taught her to do a job and do it well. Through demonstrations she learned to show others how to do the things that have helped her. Through judging she has developed her knowledge and ability. The parties, group meetings, and trips to fairs, camps, etc., have been a source of pleasure as well as knowledge.

C O N N E C T I C U T

Victor F. Galgowski, Middlesex County, is completing his seventh year as a club member. For 2 years he has served as local leader; and last year his club, with Victor supervising, set out 1,000 spruce trees for a neighbor. His interests have been varied and include poultry and cattle raising, potatoes, health, poster making, essay writing, judging, and demonstrating. He has been treasurer of two 4-H Clubs and of the county 4-H fair association.

Doris A. Ruwet, Litchfield County, is now in her ninth year of club work. For 7 years she has taken part in the dress revue, and each year has had entries in the county fairs. Her interest has been chiefly in clothing projects, but she has developed others such as canning, room improvement, first aid, and foods. One year she was in the girls' chorus at the rural youth conference. She studied dramatics in her local club in which she has served as president, vice president, secretary, and treasurer.

George Tremaine Goodwin, New London County, lives on a very small farm and raises a lot of chickens. During his 9 years of 4-H membership he has carried garden and poultry projects. This year he added handicraft to his work. His birds have made a good showing in five egg-laying contests. George has given about 20 demonstrations, is a local leader, and has filled all the offices in his local club.

Marion Woodward, Litchfield County, has carried projects in garden, clothing, food, health, home-ground improvement, and canning during her 7 years in 4-H Club work. She exhibited foods, clothing, and canned products at county fairs and took part in foods and clothing judging contests. She has helped plan achievement programs and club suppers, and has served as president, vice president, and treasurer of her local club and as vice president of the county club.

D E L A W A R E

Lister V. Hall, Jr., Kent County, is a comparative newcomer to 4-H Club work. He became a member in 1938, and has specialized in swine raising. One year he took part in a dramatic contest and won first place in the county. For two years he attended the 4-H short course at the University, an experience which has proved most helpful not only in his club work, but also in his home life. His contacts with 4-H Clubs proved useful when he entered college.

Rich Phillips, New Castle County, has done excellent work in his corn project since he entered the 4-H Club 7 years ago. One year he made a test production for a fertilizer company with outstanding results. Rich was vice president of his club several years, and last year served as president. He is also a member of the junior council. This year he has added two more projects - dairy and poultry - and is working on them along with his corn project.

Alberta H. Pordham, New Castle County, after 8 years of club work, is financing a business course with money earned on her projects. Although her first interest was in sewing, she has also acquired 5 dairy cows, 5 pigs, and 133 chickens. Alberta has participated in the State dress revue, exhibited animals, and judged canning at the county and State fairs. It is her desire to get other young people interested in 4-H Club work in order that they may share the wonderful opportunities it has afforded her.

Sue O. Webb, Sussex County, began her club work 9 years ago with a sewing project and has continued it each year. Food preparation and canning have also come in for their share of attention. A pressure cooker, received as a State award, helps considerably in canning enough garden products to feed a family of nine during the winter months. Sue feels she has gained immeasurably, in the way of poise and character development, from participating in and conducting club meetings. She has filled all the offices in her local club and finds the reporter's job much to her liking.

F L O R I D A

Lawrence Edward Bradley, Leon County, has served as local leader and president for 6 of the 9 years he has been a 4-H Club member. Each year of club membership he has exhibited his projects at the State fair. Lawrence has completed records on 14 different projects, and has taken an active part in community affairs.

Jack T. Dyer, Union County, is very much interested in livestock production and has completed 7 years of livestock work in the 4-H Club. He specializes in raising hogs, but was a member of the dairy demonstration team in 1940. He has been president of his county 4-H organization for 2 years and has served as secretary, vice president, and reporter of his local club.

Willie Mae Mixon, Manatee County, has been an enthusiastic club member for 8 years, during which time she has developed leadership ability, and has been outstanding in various phases of 4-H work. When she entered a new high school she chose 4-H Clubs as the topic for several classroom talks and found a ready audience eager for all the information available on the subject. Willie Mae and her sister organized a 4-H Club orchestra which has played before civic clubs in the city and at the State short course. This year Willie Mae is keeping records on her father's orange grove.

Gertrude Noxtine, Pinellas County, during 5 years of 4-H Club work has completed long-time demonstrations in clothing, home improvement, gardening, canning, poultry, dairy, foods, and health. She has given a number of talks and demonstrations on different phases of club work, has served as president of the local 4-H Club and of the county council, and has been a member of the State council for 2 years.

Jimmy Batcheldor, Muscogee County, since becoming a 4-H Club member 10 years ago, has specialized in livestock production. Each year he has raised and exhibited both cattle and pigs. With proceeds from these projects Jimmy purchased a tractor on which he put lights so that he could break land at night for spring planting without interfering with his last year of high school. The feed crop he raised on this land was enough to carry 100 dairy cows from November through April. His crops included corn, peas, and oats. He also cared for a home garden.

Eugenia Fletcher, Lowndes County, has had 4 years of 4-H Club experience in garden, home improvement, clothing, marketing, and canning work. She was vice president of her local club and president of the county 4-H council. Eugenia finds many opportunities to put to practical use in her home the improved methods she learns in her club. She has had winning exhibits at county and State fairs and has participated in dress revues and in team demonstrations. She also assists other families in her community by demonstrating the things she has learned as a 4-H Club member.

Dan Pinckney, Chatham County, entered 4-H Club work 5 years ago and chose as his first projects mules and hogs. Prior to that time Dan had always lived in the city. At Bethesda, where he lives, he and the other boys have charge of the herd of 36 dairy cows and grow their own vegetables. They have built an outdoor theatre and otherwise improved the grounds. A new tank affords them a sanitary water supply and also enables them to provide an overhead irrigation system for their vegetable garden. Dan has improved his physical condition by following health rules set up in the 4-H Club.

Juanita Potter, Jackson County, now in her seventh year of 4-H Club membership has 15 projects to her credit, is program chairman of her club and secretary and treasurer of the county 4-H council, and has organized a rifle club. In her local club she has taught songs, led recreational activities, and assisted new members with their records and projects. At home she has planted an orchard, has helped repaint the inside of the house, and has done much toward improvement of the home grounds. Food preparation has become one of her major projects because it is so useful in her home.

I L L I N O I S

Lorraine Anderson, Sangamon County, became a club member as soon as she was old enough, but was not satisfied with the projects offered - poultry and home beautification. So in response to her appeal her older sister organized a club of local young girls. In this club Loraine learned to sew. She served as an officer of the county 4-H federation for 3 years and has been in the county 4-H orchestra for 6 years. Loraine has already done considerable leadership work, and wants to do more.

Francis Boyle, Putnam County, began club work 7 years ago with a Jersey heifer and calf. Later he added other projects such as health, corn, sheep, farm accounts, and swine. He has participated in dairy, livestock, and corn judging, and has been successful in each. Last year he participated in the radio broadcast on the occasion of the twenty-fifth anniversary of 4-H Club work. Earnings from his club projects are helping to pay his expenses at the university this year.

El Roy H. Dannewitz, De Kalb County, began 4-H Club work in 1933. Each year since then he has had a fine pig project. His dairy projects have included milk production records and heifers. Other projects are corn and farm accounts. He has three aims for this year's work: Check the entire dairy herd and feed balanced rations; go to the State fair with his hogs and cattle and his father's dairy herd; and keep a farm account.

Louise Downey, Putnam County, was enrolled in her first club at the age of 10. She has completed projects in sewing, room improvement, foods, poultry, home grounds beautification, health, and leadership. Last year in order to be of help at home Louise selected projects that would fit into the work of the home, and the plan proved most successful. For 3 years she acted as assistant leader in the clothing club, and for the past 2 years has been leader. Louise's record books show a yearly improvement and development.

I N D I A N A

Charles J. Duesler, Noble County, began his club work in 1932 with a lamb project which he has continued throughout his 10 years of membership. In addition to this major project he has carried others - swine, beef, dairy, corn, and soil conservation. He has been song leader, news reporter, vice president, and president of various county clubs, and has served as an assistant leader for 5 years and as leader 3 years.

Betty Anne Leaming, Tippecanoe County, has participated in 4-H Club activities for 7 years, serving as assistant leader for 3 years. She has been successful in judging and demonstration work in connection with her projects in clothing, food preparation, baking, canning, and room improvement. Betty Anne has directed the music at 2 county 4-H camps, served as pianist for her local club, and was a member of a selected choir of 12 at State leadership camp. She has been president and vice president of her local club, and has filled the same offices in the county junior leader organization.

Margie Martin, Jackson County, in her 7 years of club work has completed 18 projects, including baking, clothing, food preparation, forestry, and leadership. She has participated in baking and forestry judging contests and has exhibited baked products and her leadership scrapbook at State fairs. Margie has been vice president, secretary, and treasurer of her local club and song leader for local, county, and State groups. She has served as a local leader for 4 years.

Elmer Nussbaum, Adams County, chose a calf for his first project when he became a 4-H Club member in 1931. He has continued the calf project each year and added corn, potatoes, beets, dairy, poultry, swine, leadership, soil conservation, electrification, farm accounting, and room improvement. Elmer has done outstanding judging and demonstration work and has been active as a leader in the local clubs.

I O W A

Margaret Kelsey, Hardin County, was enrolled as a 4-H Club member in 1934. In the past 7 years she has completed projects in home furnishing, home efficiency, clothing, food preservation, and baking. She has given 19 demonstrations and 18 talks, and has exhibited at the State fair each year. Margaret has served as historian, vice president, president, and secretary of her local club, and as news reporter and president of the county organization.

Merle Lang, Poweshiek County, is completing his eleventh year as a 4-H Club member. The 11 years have been filled with work and achievement, with a few losses now and then that seemed big at the time. He has been a regular exhibitor of dairy calves, hogs, and corn at the county and State fairs, and has participated in judging and demonstrations each year. Achievement in these projects has won for him various trips and awards. Merle served as secretary, treasurer, and president of the county 4-H Club and as secretary of the State boys' 4-H Club.

Richard Nelson, Boone County, has acquired a fund of practical knowledge through his 4-H Club projects which include baby beef, dairy calf, pigs, corn, and conservation. He has also been outstanding in grain and livestock judging and in team demonstrations. Richard served as secretary, treasurer, and president in his local club, held a county office one year, and is now president of the State 4-H Club.

Ella Jean Waddell, Woodbury County, lives on a 280-acre farm; and it is there that she has carried out her 4-H Club projects during the past 8 years. Through home-furnishing and home-efficiency demonstrations she has refinished old furniture, renovated rooms, and added hand-constructed articles that save steps and time in housekeeping. She has planned and served meals and is learning to preserve garden surpluses for winter use. She has been active in various community and school organizations.

K A N S A S

Irene Hotchkiss, Butler County, since enrolling in club work 10 years ago has completed 63 projects, and prepared 16 exhibits for State fairs and stock shows. Irene has filled all the offices of her club and served on numerous committees. She is a member of the three 4-H orchestras in her county and of the county chorus. Last year she was awarded the State championship in home beautification.

Clair K. Parcel, Comanche County, has been a 4-H Club member for 11 years and has completed projects in sorghum, baking, poultry, wheat, leadership, and livestock. He served as president and vice president of his local club, vice president of the county council, superintendent at the county fair, mayor of a tri-county camp, councilman at State camp, and as member of a committee that established one of the largest game preserves in the State. He has participated in grain, livestock, and poultry judging in the State.

Merna Vincent, Rice County, began club work in 1932 and each year has prepared exhibits in clothing, baking, home improvement, and poultry for the State fair. She has won championships at the county fair 3 years. Merna is now a junior leader and this year is assisting younger members in clothing, poultry, and record projects. She has filled various local and county club offices.

Maxell Williams, Mitchell County, started his club work in 1930 and for 11 years carried projects in livestock. In addition to his work with swine, sheep, and beef, he completed records on garden, leadership, and home-beautification projects. Maxell has filled all the offices of his local club and served as president of the county council for 3 years.

K E N T U C K Y

Gerald Schaffer, Union County, has been in club work for half of his lifetime. He is chiefly interested in livestock, having exhibited animals at 8 county fairs, at each of the 9 tri-State shows held at Evansville, Ind., and at 9 State shows. He has participated on demonstration and judging teams; has served as secretary, vice president, and president of his local club; and in 1939 was president of the Kentucky Association of 4-H Clubs.

Wayne Steward, Rockcastle County, in addition to planting locust trees to prevent soil erosion, has completed projects in tobacco, corn, sheep, garden, potatoes, and forestry. During his 6 years of club work he has made a good cash profit on his projects, and he is now using the money for college expenses. He has done considerable leadership work, has been on champion demonstration teams, and has also done judging work.

Gladys Tilton, Fayette County, has completed 14 projects in clothing, room improvement, foods, and food preservation. For products exhibited at district and State fairs, during her 9 years of club work she has won a number of awards. She has served her local club as president, song leader, assistant leader, and leader; and has attended all meetings of the club since 1932 - 82 meetings. Gladys was a member of the county champion demonstration team.

Ollie Frances Wilson, Madison County, has won a number of championships during her 7 years in club work, such as county champion of clothing judging, foods judging, and room-furnishing judging. As well as State champion in fourth unit clothing. She has filled the various offices of her local club and has served as secretary of the Kentucky Association of 4-H Clubs.

L O U I S I A N A

Ruth Childress, East Baton Rouge Parish, became a 4-H Club member in 1934, and ever since has "kept busy as a bee, cheerful as a cricket, and steady as a clock." In 4 years Ruth canned over 2,000 quarts of vegetables, fruits, preserves, pickles, and meat. From small beginnings have come many good things. There is the large pressure cooker awarded her for canning; the modern roomy pantry for storing her products; delightful gifts to friends and the needy; a bounteously fed family, and a college scholarship. Ruth has also carried poultry and sewing projects.

Luke Leger, Jr., Acadia Parish, during his 5 years as a 4-H Club member, has devoted his energies to demonstrations and leadership. He has carried projects in cotton and corn and has exhibited at State fairs, but he has been particularly interested in parliamentary law, conducting meetings, and public speaking. Besides having held several offices in his local club, including the presidency, Luke has been president of the parish executive council, a delegate to the State council for 3 years, and vice president of the State executive council.

Annie Ruth Melville, Tensas Parish, has made a specialty of garden work during her 5 years of club membership. A food preservation project was the natural outgrowth, since the object of the garden was to produce a well-balanced diet for a family of 14. In 1939 she was named State gardening champion. She has carried other projects also, such as clothing, health, poultry, food preservation, and room improvement. She has filled various offices in her club and has found time to participate fully in school activities.

Tait Whittington, Rapides Parish, joined a 4-H Club in the spring of 1937, shortly after his family moved to a farm. He has had projects in cotton, corn, crop judging, heifer, and record keeping. His position as president of the 4-H livestock association makes him chairman of the committee to plan and stage the district 4-H livestock show and world championship rodeo in Alexandria. This year Tait was chosen Rapides Parish's most outstanding young man. This honor came about as a result of his work in the community, aside from his 4-H Club program.

M A I N E

Eunice Bailey, Piscataquis County, has enjoyed the trips made possible to her through her 8 years of club membership. She has won numerous honors on the results of her projects in cooking, house-keeping, and clothing. The knowledge and experience received in 4-H Club work has proved most practical for use in her home. Eunice has participated in high-school clubs and community organizations, and served as local leader of her 4-H Club for 3 years.

Oral L. Dunivan, Penobscot County, is doing an excellent job in 3 major projects - dairy, potatoes, and garden. He has spent 8 years in developing this work, and has won many honors during that time. He is proud of his achievements in the 4-H Club and especially so, since it ties in with the work on the farm and helps his family toward a fuller living program. Oral has taken an active interest in leadership in his club.

Earl Ellsworth, Franklin County, was enrolled in a dairy club in 1934 as the beginning of his 4-H Club work. He has taken first honors and championships each year on his projects, which include dairy, baby beef, and poultry. One of the high lights of his club career was the trip to the National Dairy Show last year as the result of his being on the winning State demonstration team. Earl has been president and secretary of his club.

Mavis Leavitt, Androscoggin County, has been busy with 4-H Club projects for the past 8 years, and in that time has won five county championships. She has exhibited her canning and sewing each year, and has entered the judging and demonstration competitions. Mavis is outstanding in community activities, both in and out of the 4-H Club. She was a leader for 2 years.

MARYLAND

Paul Duke, Jr., Prince Georges County, was enrolled in club work in the fall of 1936. He selected poultry as his first project and has continued it every year. He also has a dairy project, and raises corn for feed. Paul has been outstanding in poultry judging, and also in team demonstrations. He has filled most of the offices of his club, has been treasurer of the county senior council, is leader of the local club, and chairman of the county all-stars.

Lucinda Holloway, Dorchester County, has already been called upon to make practical use of the training received in her 4 years as a 4-H Club member. Besides keeping house, preparing meals for four men, and attending high school during the winter months, Lucinda has found time to develop projects in poultry, flower garden, home furnishing, handicraft, canning, and clothing. She served as reporter in her first club year and later as secretary. Last year she was elected president of the county federation. She has literary ambitions, and has written a one-act play for the 4-H Club to use.

William King, Montgomery County, started his club work 5 years ago with a dairy project, which has grown into a herd of 18 purebred Jerseys. He served as a member of the State 4-H demonstration team at the National Dairy Show in 1938. Last year he won first place in a State and Eastern States public-speaking contest. After graduation from high school William took over the management of his father's three farms. The same year he was a member of the dairy judging team that placed first in the State.

Ann Tipton, Montgomery County, as a result of 7 years training in 4-H Clubs, now makes practically all her clothes. She was so proud of the first dress she made that instead of handing it down to her younger sister, she put it in a trunk with other treasures. Through her baking project, Ann came in contact with the Farm Women's Cooperative Market where she now works every Saturday. She has also carried projects in canning, and room improvement, and has made a mark for herself in public speaking.

M A S S A C H U S E T T S

Phyllis Hamilton, Franklin County, became a club member as soon as her age permitted, and has been going strong ever since. Her "first love" was canning, a project which seems to have held its allure through the years. Her other interests include community improvement, room furnishing, household arts, and leadership. Her last leadership project was with a large group of younger people in a foods club.

George A. Hoffman, Essex County, began his club work in 1935 with a garden project. Lack of space necessitated a choice in interests the next year, and poultry won out. Along the line of conservation he has each year destroyed all tent caterpillar nests in all wooded sections near his home. Another project was in metal craft. George directs his 4-H Club orchestra and is in charge of its musical program. During the past 4 years he has been active in leadership work, and has helped organize discussion groups among other 4-H Clubs.

Muriel Louise Salley, Bristol County, recalls many delightful experiences as a result of her 7 years as a club member. It all began with the making of an apron by hand. Since then Muriel has carried through to completion projects in kitchens, foods, metal craft, and clothing. She has been particularly successful in demonstration work. After entering achievement day contests several years, she took her own group with her last year and they participated instead of her.

Gerald Smith, Dukes County, started club work 4 years ago with a poultry project. His garden supplied the family with enough canned goods to last through the winter. He also finished a handicraft project. This year he became junior leader of a metal-craft club made up of small boys. Gerald once saw in a magazine an article on novelty name pins. He adapted the idea and has since made a tidy sum from these pins consisting of small pieces of wood and alphabet-soup letters. One year he was a member of a poultry judging team at the Boston Poultry Show, and the next year acted in the same capacity at the Eastern States Exposition.

Harley Barber, Bay County, has served as an assistant local leader 7 of the 9 years he has been in 4-H Club work. He has carried projects in poultry, handicraft, gardening, canning, and dairying. He also raised pheasants to start new flocks in the district. Harley gained some valuable experience by managing his father's farm, and is now planning for his own farm. He has filled every office of his local club, has been a member of the State poultry judging team, and has been a member of the State poultry judging team, and has also given poultry demonstrations.

Arlene Marshall, Calhoun County, has been a 4-H Club member 9 years, carrying projects in clothing, food preparation, canning, and beef raising. Arlene has been on the county clothing judging team and the food preparation demonstration team. She participated in the county dress revue 3 years, and the junior livestock show in Detroit 6 years. She has been secretary of the county 4-H council and of the county 4-H service club, president and secretary of her local club, and a local leader 3 years. Last year Arlene was awarded a national scholarship as well as a State 4-H scholarship.

Clare L. McGhan, Charlevoix County, began 4-H Club work 9 years ago with a Jersey calf as a project. To pay for the calf, Clare had to work for his grandfather the required number of hours at 10 cents per hour to make up the sum. In addition to his continued dairy project, Clare has taken on handicraft and bean projects. He was awarded a trip to the State fair as health champion, and a second time as a member of the dairy judging team. He has been secretary of his local club, twice president, and a leader for 3 years.

Isabel Raynard, Chippewa County, a 4-H Club member for the past 9 years, has been an assistant leader 5 years and a local leader 6 years. Her work as a member has included projects in clothing, foods, canning, handicraft, baking, home management, and outdoor meals. Isabel has given demonstrations each year at local and county fairs, and in the last few years has represented her county at State camp in clothing and canning judging. She has filled practically every office in her local and county clubs, and served as vice president of the State 4-H service club.

Ione Evelyn Oberg, West Polk County, is now in her tenth year of 4-H Club membership. She has completed records on projects in sheep, garden, clothing, baking, home beautification, junior leadership, canning, meal planning, and health. She has directed a girls sextette at county and district festivals, helped with a girls' trio, and taken part in a double quartet. Also she has participated in the county dress revue; in clothing judging; and in dairy, poultry, clothing, and baking demonstrations. Ione is now president of her club.

MISSISSIPPI

Maurice Brown, Washington County, in 7 years of 4-H Club work has completed projects in cotton, corn, alfalfa, poultry, swine, and entomology. As a result of his club projects he now owns 40 acres of Delta land, 30 hogs, 25 laying hens, 2 mules, 5 tons of hay, 100 bushels of corn, farming equipment and 2 houses on the land.

Beth Gill, De Soto County, has done outstanding 4-H Club work for 7 years. She has built up a fine poultry flock from which she has realized a good profit. Her other projects include clothing, home improvement, foods, garden, canning, yard improvement, farm home accounts, and leadership. Beth delights in leading folk dancing and singing, and otherwise assisting in community programs, and at county camp. She has trained demonstration teams, assisted with fair exhibits, and filled offices in her local club and in the county council.

Tom Allene Rose, Lowndes County, has completed 6 years as a 4-H Club member. Each year she has carried a garden-canning project because she believes it is essential to the health and welfare of her family. She has also completed several food-preparation projects and is much interested in room improvement.

Nelson Shaul, Noxubee County, lives on a 2,527 acre farm. He has been a 4-H Club member for 6 years and has completed projects in beef cattle, dairy, swine, cotton, corn, sorghum, and soybeans. He has been outstanding in showmanship and judging and demonstration work. Nelson was president of his local club for 5 years and president and secretary of the county executive committee. He has acted as club leader for 4 years.

M I S S O U R I

James Heitmeyer, Monroe County, started in 4-H Club work about 5 years ago. He has had experience during these years in baby-beef, health, first-aid, and forestry projects. He now has a livestock business consisting of 11 ewes and 2 steers. James has represented his county twice in State demonstration contests. He was president of his club for 3 years and president of his high-school class for the same length of time.

Marceline Lankford, Newton County, has been in 4-H Club work 9 years and has completed 13 projects in clothing, food preservation, and food preparation. She is now active in her community as a club leader. Last year the two groups which she led in foods and health did outstanding work, and her club reported 100-percent completions.

Mary Jean Lentz, Jackson County, over a period of 9 years as a 4-H Club member, has completed 29 projects in clothing, foods, livestock, crops, and judging work. Being a girl has not kept her from taking a keen interest in the livestock work offered in the club, and she has made it profitable as a source of income. Mary Jean has been leader and assistant leader in her club for the past 4 years and is now active in the university 4-H Club.

Jack McFerron, Jasper County, has been principally interested in livestock projects since becoming a 4-H Club member 6 years ago. He has completed demonstrations in beef, sheep, and hogs. During the past 2 years Jack has been assistant leader in his local club and has participated in the State judging contest and team demonstrations. He has also been interested in music, dramatics, home beautification, and wildlife conservation.

M O N T A N A

Frances Beck, Lake County, in her 9 years of club membership has completed projects in clothing, food preparation, room improvement, handicraft, and dairy. She has been active on judging and demonstration teams, in county dress revues, and has made numerous talks on 4-H Club work. She has written words for two new 4-H songs and participated in two plays. Frances has an aptitude for leadership that comes out in the way she handles the chairmanship of the following committees: Club tour, constitution and bylaws, sunshine, dance, and lunch. She plays bass drum in the Ronan band.

Alfred William Brass, Lewis and Clark County, is now in his ninth year of 4-H Club membership. He was a member of the champion agricultural demonstration team at the State fair one year and has also placed high in judging competition. In his capacity as local leader he has trained members for individual health demonstrations in the county contest, which was won by his club 2 years. Alfred also has a well-developed garden plot from which he furnishes vegetables for the family and does some marketing. He places a high evaluation on his handicraft and rural-electrification projects.

Lester Reuss, Rosebud County, has learned much about breeding sheep since he started his first project in a 4-H Club 10 years ago. He has continued his work with sheep each year and in addition has developed projects in baby beef, corn, potatoes, sugar beets, and farm accounts. Lester has served as president, vice president, reporter, treasurer, and recreation leader in his local club; president of the county 4-H Club; and vice president of the State 4-H group.

Anne A. Stiegler, Missoula County, is an old-timer, having been a 4-H Club member for 11 years. She has a remarkable record in canning, with a county, State, and national championship to her credit. Among her other interests are clothing, food preparation, room improvement, and home-grounds beautification. She has participated in clothing and canning judging contests, exhibited products at the State fair, and has appeared in 5 county dress revues. Anne has acted as assistant leader of her club and has served on numerous committees.

Doris Bamesberger, Hamilton County, in 8 years of club work learned the importance of cooperation, initiative, and originality. Her completed projects include cooking, canning, and clothing. Experience on judging and demonstration teams helped her to develop self-confidence, and also taught her to put across her point to an audience. Doris filled all the offices of her local club and served 3 years as assistant leader and 2 years as leader.

Norma Kolar, Howard County, during her 6 years of club membership, has organized clubs, planned and assisted in presenting demonstrations, exhibited at fairs, and participated in judging contests and dress revues, in addition to completing her own projects. These projects cover a wide field - food preparation, meal planning, health, conservation, dairy calf, clothing, farm accounts, swine, rope, and weeds. She has held all the offices in her local clubs, has been song leader and recreation leader, and was a member of the first 4-H Club chorus in her county.

Frank E. Krivohlavek, Saline County, became a 4-H Club member in 1934. He has completed a swine project each year and has also studied soil conservation, grass identification, farm shop, and rope. His swine projects have been exhibited at State and county fairs each year, and he served as superintendent of swine at the county fair for the last 4 years. As a result of his club work Frank now owns a dairy herd, 60 ewes, 300 hogs, and has the responsibility of farming 400 acres of land.

Robert James Rexroth, Cheyenne County, after 12 years of experience as a 4-H Club member, is now operating a 480 acre farm for himself. He completed projects in swine, dairy, baby beef, meat production, farm accounts, corn, sorghum, and rope. He has been a club leader for 4 years and was president, vice president, secretary, treasurer, news reporter, and song leader in his local club at various times.

Bernice M. Garrigus, Morris County, since becoming a club member in 1934, has divided her interest among such projects as handicraft, cooking, sewing, landscaping, home improvement, and poultry. She served in several of the offices in her club and has done a great amount of leadership work, such as managing dinners served by club members, arranging exhibits at fairs, conducting public meetings, and arranging various programs.

Leroy Hardenburg, Hunterdon County, was enrolled at the age of 10 in a 4-H garden club. The first year he planted flowers with little success. Since then he has had several poultry projects, as well as soil-fertility, corn, farm accounts, and dairy projects. He has given many poultry demonstrations, and last year he and his brother represented their dairy club in the county demonstration contest. Leroy has filled most of the offices in his local club, and is now a member of the county 4-H council. He organized, and plays in, a 5-piece orchestra that is much in demand in his community.

Dorothea Potts, Somerset County, is now in her eleventh year of club membership, and has been a leader for about 4 years. She has gained a vast amount of practical experience through her club projects in foods, clothing, gardens, handicraft, room improvement, and home management. Dorothea and her sister are busy during the summer months making articles for the Christmas gift sale which they hold in November. The things they make for this sale are a result of the training received in their 4-H Clubs.

Harry Stout, Jr., Warren County, became a 4-H Club member 8 years ago, beginning his project work with a young calf. He is building up a purebred herd for himself and is keeping growth records of each animal. Each year Harry exhibits some of these animals at county and State fairs. He has been president of his club and has held various offices in other local organizations. In 1940 he was chairman of the county 4-H rally.

N E W M E X I C O

Buster Caviness, Roosevelt County, began his 4-H career in 1936 with twin dairy calves as a project. He has worked with livestock each year, both swine and beef, and has also carried a project in grain sorghums. He has had fun feeding and caring for the animals and has won many high honors with them. He served as president and assistant leader of his club 3 years, as local leader 2 years, and as president of the county 4-H Club council for 1 year.

Tempe Gilbert, Bernalillo County, after several years of club work to her credit has a great desire to interest other boys and girls in 4-H work. She believes club work provides a good way to train young people to be happy, healthy, useful citizens. Tempe has done outstanding work in cooking, canning, home improvement, baking, and sewing. She also acted as local leader of a club which she organized in a county school. Her exhibits at county and State fairs have won many awards and afforded her much pleasure.

Mary Swinford, Curry County, has been in 4-H Club 4 years and has served as president each of these years. In the county council she has served as secretary 3 years and president 1 year. She has completed 12 projects, among them canning, baking, foods, clothing, room improvement, and yard beautification. Her club work served as a foundation for the home-economic courses she is taking in college.

Leon Wagley, Quay County, has been an enthusiastic club member since 1937. Having to plan as club president a program that included educational and recreational activities made his interest in 4-H work more intense. His personal program during these 7 years has included beef calf, sheep, swine, poultry, and field crops. This project program has netted him several hundred dollars, a quantity of feed, and 20 calves. He has found his participation in livestock judging contests and in demonstration teams valuable in his development as a leading 4-H Club member.

N E W Y O R K

Duane Benedict, Onondaga County, has been a 4-H Club member for 11 years, and each year has exhibited his dairy cattle and garden produce at the State fair. He has been successful in cattle, milk, and vegetable judging; in egg grading; and in dairy and garden demonstrations. He has served as vice president and president of the county 4-H council, president of the State 4-H council. He is a member of the Kiwanis 4-H Club, and years ago organized a local 4-H Club, of which he is still a member.

Walter Ganshaw, Niagara County, joined the 4-H Club 5 years ago, was president of the club during his first 2 years, and for the rest of the time has acted as assistant leader and as leader. He has carried projects in dairy, market and home gardens, farm shop, ducks, homemaking, strawberries, leadership, and poultry. He has participated in varied activities of the club, such as poster-making contest, project tours, public speaking, vegetable exhibits, cattle and vegetable judging, cherry pie baking contest, and record-keeping contests.

Louise E. Mullen, Genesee County, first undertook 4-H Club work 10 years ago. Her projects have been garden, potatoes, poultry, canning, clothing, foods, and forestry. She and her sister have always carried their agricultural projects on a partnership basis. One year the two girls were chosen State 4-H garden champions. Motion pictures were taken of their garden and potato projects and shown to 4-H crop members throughout the State. Louise has served as vice president of the State junior vegetable and potato growers association, and has held the same office in the national organization of the same name. She is a member of the county and State 4-H councils.

Luella Tooley, Jefferson County, was enrolled in 4-H Club work in 1932 with three projects in homemaking and one in forestry. She has given both sewing and food demonstrations at State fairs, and served as handicraft instructor at county camp. Luella has been a club leader for the past 3 years and has been president of the county 4-H council.

NORTH CAROLINA

Braxton Coates, Johnston County, is now in his eighth year of 4-H Club membership. He has become a leader in his community through club work. He has been song leader and president in his local club and in the county council and has prepared programs and led recreation groups on various occasions. Braxton has completed projects in health, poultry, potatoes, tobacco, baby beef, corn, handicraft, wildlife conservation, garden, room improvement, and farm records.

Pansy Dillard, Jackson County, has completed 4 years as a 4-H Club member. In her opinion - and she has records to back it up - her rural electrification project has proved most valuable of all her club work. The electricity is used in cooking, washing, ironing, refrigeration, lighting, and in pumping water. Other projects carried by Pansy are room improvement, canning, clothing, home beautification, foods and nutrition, garden, and health. She is president of a high school 4-H Club, leader of a junior club, and helps with the programs for a third club.

Mildred Thomas, Durham County, has completed records on 36 projects during her 9 years of 4-H Club membership. These projects include clothing, food preparation, food preservation, marketing, room improvement, accounting, and poultry. Mildred has won recognition as a leader in her community. In 1940 she was leader of a local club, president of the school 4-H Club, and president of the county 4-H council.

Robert Wood, Alamance County, has been a 4-H Club member for 4 years. Into that time he has crowded a record of outstanding achievement. He has completed 14 projects, has been a member of the local judging team, and has participated in the State dairy-demonstration contest. He served as vice president and president of his local club, secretary and treasurer of the county council, and president of the State council. Robert was active in dramatics and public speaking in high school and served as president of several school organizations.

N O R T H D A K O T A

George Adams, Bottineau County, began 4-H work when his club was first organized 7 years ago, and he has never missed a meeting. His first project was wheat, but since livestock is a year-round job, George is more interested in that, and especially in sheep. He has exhibited lambs and baby beef at county and State fairs, and has had a considerable amount of experience in livestock judging and in demonstrations on care of sheep.

Russell Heine, Dickey County, found farm life dull until he became a member of the 4-H Club, which put purpose and meaning into the ordinary chores and problems on the farm. Russell has been president and assistant leader of his club. He trapped during spare time in the winter months to earn money with which to buy a lamb, which was his first project.

Laverne Horsted, Stutsman County, as a 4-H Club member has developed projects in clothing, handicraft, home furnishings, and foods. She has participated in exhibits, style revues, demonstrations, and various contests and programs. Experience as an officer in the club has helped her develop poise and ability as a leader. Through contact with other club members, Laverne has made many worth-while friends.

Helen Richards, Cass County, joined her first 4-H Club 8 years ago, although she had been attending club meetings as a visitor for 2 years previous to that. Helen has carried clothing, food-planning and preparation, home-furnishing, conservation, and farm-accounts projects, and has tried to participate in every phase of 4-H work offered. At present she is training to be a nurse.

O H I O

Emily Ann Benson, Wyandot County, throughout her 7 years of 4-H Club work has been active in all phases of the club program. She has completed projects in clothing, nutrition, gardening, canning, and junior leadership. Supplementing her club work have been her school activities. She was a member of the school orchestra, glee club, and dramatic club, and was on the staffs of the yearbook and school paper.

Carolyn L. Dorn, Madison County, has a record of 9 years of 4-H Club achievement. She has carried projects in clothing, foods, and leadership, and has participated in athletic activities and musical organizations. Carolyn has also had experience in connection with school publications.

William Reed Poling, Van Wert County, is now farming at home. The training received during his 10 years of 4-H Club work may account for the efficient manner in which he carries out his present job. With the exception of 2 years' work with sugar beets, all his projects were with livestock. William is doing good leadership work in his community.

Paul W. Ulmer, Washington County, has been working at home since he was graduated from high school in 1938. During his 9 years of 4-H Club membership he has specialized in crop production and gardening, and has completed two projects in electricity. His garden was ruined one year by hail, but success in other years has made up for that loss.

O K L A H O M A

Wayne Boyd, Ottawa County, has completed 36 projects during his 9 years of 4-H Club membership, and has the only registered plot in wildlife conservation in his county. He has been a member of two State judging teams, of the county champion demonstration team, and was county champion in dress revue, and reserve champion in the timely topics contest this year. His projects include baby beef, crops, poultry, wildlife, entomology, gardening, and yard improvement.

Mattie Ada Cozart, Garfield County, during her 9 years in 4-H Clubs has exhibited at fairs 42 articles in home demonstration work and 103 animals in livestock work. She has completed projects in clothing, home improvement, canning, foods, sheep, yard improvement, swine, and poultry. She has directed the winning county chorus in State contests 2 years, led the singing at State meetings, and participated in State play contests 2 years. Mattie has held 11 offices in her local clubs, was president of the county 4-H organization, and was superintendent of girls' 4-H work at the county fair.

Wilma Hamm, Tillman County, is now in her eighth year as a club member. The number of projects completed - 54 - shows that she has been an "active" member. Wilma's exhibits at fairs have been consistently outstanding. She was county winner for 3 consecutive years in the timely topic contest, was on the county champion demonstration team 1 year, and was a member of the State clothing judging team 1 year. Last year she led the county group in two songs in the State contest. She has been president and secretary of her local club, president of the county 4-H organization, and local girls' captain.

Dayton Rose, Okfuskee County, began his club work 9 years ago with a livestock project which he has enlarged each year. He has been successful in judging and demonstration work and in exhibiting his projects. He is also prominent in leadership in his State. Dayton was president of his local club for 4 years in succession, of the county federation 3 years, and last year was president of the southeast district organization, made up of clubs from 16 counties.

Mary Kane, Allegheny County, remembers well the day 8 years ago when a 4-H Club was organized in her school and she became a loyal worker. Her projects have emphasized foods and clothing, and concentration on these has taught her thoroughness and efficiency. She has been president, secretary, game and song leader of her club, and chairman of the entertainment committees for several local round-ups.

Edward Kosa, Jr., Potter County, was one of the first members of the 4-H Club in his community, and started his work with a Jersey calf as a project. It is Edward's intention to raise purebred cattle and sheep, and he already has a good start in that direction. He also plans to produce seed potatoes. Along the line of leadership, he has been president of his club and is now acting as assistant leader.

Richard B. Lefever, Lancaster County, has had 5 years' experience as a baby beef club member and has enrolled for the sixth year with tobacco and corn as additional projects. He is a member of a choral club and is an accomplished trumpet player. Richard has taken part in several radio broadcasts, has served as toastmaster at club banquets, and has been president of his club.

Lucille Whitmer, Northumberland County, is in her sixth year as a 4-H Club member and has been secretary, president, and news reporter of her club. She has completed projects in foods, clothing, and health, and carried a flower garden project one year. Lucille has attended club week and leadership training school, has been on the foods judging team, has been a junior leader, and has assisted in recreational activities of her club.

This space was reserved for Puerto Rico delegates, but because of circumstances beyond their control they were unable to attend the Camp.

R H O D E I S L A N D

Horace Almy, Newport County, has had 8 happy years of 4-H Club work. His first trip to State camp was an award for his work in a caterpillar control campaign. He has also carried projects in dairy, poultry, garden, handicraft, and farm management, and has done judging and demonstration work. At present he is leader of an electrification club.

Ronald Anderson, Kent County, is carrying projects in discussion, leadership, landscaping, poultry, and forestry. He is also interested in the 4-H boys clothing program and has taken part in several style revues. Ronald has done poultry judging, and, with a teammate, gave an egg-use demonstration at various community meetings and at Camp Vail. Last year he and his brother took over a poultry farm with 1,200 layers. They plan to hatch and sell baby chicks.

Nadine Dawley, Washington County, has spent 9 busy years in 4-H Clubs. Her projects have included gardens, health, leadership, first aid, clothing, and discussion. About 3 years ago Nadine started a club of her own which now consists of 11 members. She has been secretary and treasurer in some of her local clubs and is active in 4-H senior conferences and in the college 4-H Club.

Mary Matteson, Providence County, is a leader in her community and has been a club member 8 years. She has carried sewing, food preparation, and strawberry projects, and has participated in style revues, food demonstrations, and 4-H camps. Mary now serves as local leader of a club of younger girls. She has led discussion groups, has taken a leading part in 4-H camps each year, and has been editor of several different school papers. At present she is a correspondence reporter on a local paper.

SOUTH CAROLINA

Caroline E. Coleman, Anderson County, could hardly wait until she was old enough to enroll in the 4-H Club in her community, and now she has completed 8 years as a member. Her projects have been health, foods and nutrition, room improvement, clothing, home management, gardening, and canning. Caroline serves as junior local leader for her club, and has organized a chorus club among members of the junior council. These girls have sung over the radio several times and have appeared on the programs of various community organizations.

Bernice Hance, Lancaster County, is in her eighth year of 4-H Club membership. Her projects have been room improvement, clothing, home furnishing, home management, gardening, foods, canning, and poultry. Her club provided a tomato plant hotbed for the use of their families, canned vegetables for the school-lunch project, cleaned windows and doors of the schoolhouse, and painted mail boxes in the community. Bernice has been pianist for her local club and has served as vice president, secretary, and treasurer.

Roy Howle, Darlington County, now in his tenth year in 4-H Club work, has completed projects in poultry, swine, corn, sugarcane, and tobacco. He has participated in county and State demonstration contests and in district judging contests. Through his influence the following improved practices have been adopted on his farm: Seed treatment to reduce disease, use of good breeding stock, and use of well-balanced poultry feeds and good fertilizers. For the past 5 years Roy has served as an officer in his local club.

Carlisle Lewis, Sumter County, during 8 years as a 4-H Club member, has completed 10 demonstrations in corn, swine, and soybeans. Through his 4-H work he has gained valuable experience in raising and showing livestock and in keeping records. Since 1932 Carlisle has been secretary, vice president, and president of local clubs and is now a local leader. Many improved practices have been adopted on his home farm as a result of his 4-H Club work.

SOUTH DAKOTA

Eugene Edward Buhler, Day County, has concentrated on live-stock since first becoming a 4-H Club member in 1932. Every year he has raised sheep, and in the last 3 years has branched out into swine, colt, and baby-beef projects. He is much interested in wild-life conservation and has planted about 3,000 trees in his conser-vation program. At present Eugene is president of both his local club and the county 4-H Club.

Mary DeWilde, Grant County, says her club work is as impor-tant to her as when she began it 10 years ago. She has developed projects in poultry, pig, home furnishing, meal planning and home life, and has received valuable instruction in music, drama, and wildlife. She claims that she uses some 4-H gained knowledge every day. Mary has served in every office in her club and as assistant leader.

Luella Larson, Kingsbury County, has divided her interest, since becoming a club member 7 years ago, among such projects as lamb feeding, clothing, home furnishing, foods, conservation, and health. She has exhibited products from these projects at the State fair every year, and has represented her county on judging and demonstration teams at the State fair several times. As an assistant leader, Luella is devoting a portion of her time to in-struction of younger club members in improved methods of homemak-ing and farming.

Charles F. Snyder, Turner County, has been a 4-H Club member for 5 years, and has acted as assistant leader for 3 years and as local leader 2 years. He has raised sheep and pigs and has culti-vated potatoes. He was champion showman in the fat-lamb and pure-bred-sheep classes at the county fair and has exhibited lambs and sheep at the State fair. He has served as president of several local 4-H Clubs and also of the county 4-H Club.

T E N N E S S E E

Verneda Boynton, Bledsoe County, has kept records on all her projects during her 7 years of 4-H Club work. These projects include clothing, gardening, food preparation, canning, poultry, personal accounts, and health. Her garden has been a great help to the family, and the influence has spread throughout the community. Her late garden, which contains lettuce, parsnips, cauliflower, beans, tomatoes, brussels sprouts, cabbage, mustard, turnips, parsley, pepper, okra, beets, and onions, is a guarantee against uninteresting meals in her home.

Merle Crawley, Hamilton County, in 9 years of club work, has submitted 36 completed records in corn production, Irish potatoes, peanuts, sweetpotatoes, beef cattle, dairy cattle, swine, poultry, forestry, and beekeeping. He served 3 years each on the dairy judging team and on the crops judging team at the State short course. Merle has been secretary, vice president, assistant leader, and leader of his local club.

Mell Miller, Montgomery County, an outstanding 4-H Club member for 10 years, has been on the county crops judging team 6 years, has exhibited his products at fairs for 6 years, and has attended county rallies and fall round-up several years. He has done excellent work in fattening and breeding beef cattle and swine, dairying and raising of dairy cattle, sheep and lamb production, poultry flock management, farm accounting, and in the production of corn, potatoes, and peanuts. Mell has served as president of his local club.

Edith Williams, Davidson County, comes from a 4-H Club family. A sister and four brothers before her were 4-H Club members, and her mother was a local leader. Edith's major project has been in sewing, and on the dresses and linens made and exhibited in this project she has won numerous awards for the excellence of her work. She is also interested in handicrafts and various phases of homemaking. Edith has given demonstrations in block printing, and at 4-H Club camp one year was instructor in archery. She enjoys meeting with the nature club which she organized among younger club members.

Charles Ball, Lamar County, entered 4-H Club work in 1935 at the age of 11, with an acre of Irish potatoes as his first project. Since then he has developed projects in cotton, corn, soybeans, beef and dairy cattle, sheep, and leadership. He has given pecan-budding and seed-selection demonstrations and has been a member of crop judging and dairy judging teams. Charles has talked at many public gatherings and was chosen by State 4-H Club leaders to preside at an open meeting of 4-H Club rally at the State college, attended by more than 4,000 club people.

Sarah Pearl Davis, Cooke County, has completed 6 years of 4-H Club work. She has gained worth-while experience, aside from saving the family considerable expense by developing such projects as gardens, canning, clothing, room improvement, home-grounds beautification, and orchard. She has been president and reporter in her club. In 1938 she was garden demonstrator, and the next year bedroom demonstrator. Sarah has made several games from which her family and friends get a lot of fun.

Marvin McMillan, Mason County, now a student at State college, entered 4-H Club work 9 years ago. Every year he has raised calves which he took to various stock shows throughout the State. Marvin now owns four registered Hereford cows, one bull, and three heifers. His experience in handling, care, and judging of livestock will be valuable when he invests in ranch land and cattle after finishing his college course.

Elizabeth Reuter, McLennan County, is in her seventh year of club work. She has carried projects in clothing, gardening, canning, poultry, and room improvement. She and her two sisters, also club members, set out an orchard, raised the chickens for the family, and kept records on them. The entire family cooperated when it came to refinishing rooms and furniture throughout the home. Elizabeth is now president of her club and has been reporter for the club for 4 years. She has also participated in dairy judging and in poultry demonstrations.

Richard Douse, Caledonia County, began club work 7 years ago with a garden project and has won several county championships on it. He has also studied and completed demonstrations in forestry, poultry, handicraft, and leadership. Richard has been president, vice president, secretary, treasurer, and game leader in his club, and has served on various committees.

Gerald Folsom, Windsor County, now in his ninth year of club work, has found his projects in handicraft, forestry, garden, leadership, and room improvement to be valuable in the way of practical experience. His family has been benefited by his club work because he has furnished his family with vegetables from his garden and with hand-made articles, and has bought all his own clothes with earnings from his projects. Gerald has been news reporter, vice president, assistant leader, and leader of his local club.

Shirley Jewett, Addison County, outstanding in 4-H Club work for 8 years, has entered six annual dress revues and three State canning contests. She has filled all the offices in her club including that of song leader. This year she is training her club to sing three-part harmony, and that involves the teaching of fundamentals of music to several young club members. She has been bugler and song leader at county camp. Shirley has completed projects in junior leadership, clothing, foods, room improvement, poultry, and canning.

Marion Plumb, Windsor County, has started her ninth year as a club member, and her third as an assistant leader. She has been particularly interested in the clothing project offered in her club, and has selected it each year. She has also studied foods and leadership. Marion had a part in the county contest play, was song leader at county camp and State meetings, and has taken an active part in various community organizations.

VIRGINIA

Bryan Alvis, Jr., Henrico County, first became a 4-H Club member 11 years ago. During the last 8 years he has exhibited his dairy projects at the State fair and has won numerous awards on his achievements. He has held the offices of president, vice president, and treasurer in his local club; and vice president of the all-stars, of which he has been a member for 4 years. This year he is leader of a club composed of 120 members.

Taylor Grizzard, Greensville County, has been a 4-H Club member for 6 years, during which time he has raised cotton, peanuts, corn, and sheep. Each year it has been his aim to make his projects a little better by making use of the improved farm practices learned in club work. He has also given public demonstrations of these improved practices for the benefit of his neighbors. Taylor has exhibited samples of his projects each year at the county fair. As president of the county 4-H council he helped plan and direct an educational tour to Washington. He helped put on a club demonstration booth and prepared exhibits for the local county fair, and last year took part in the county crop judging contest at the State fair.

Louise Rash, Nottoway County, during her 7 years in club work has carried a variety of projects, such as cucumbers, home improvement, garden, clothing, canning, health, and accounts. One year in her garden project she carried on an irrigation experiment with the aid of the county agent and gave a report on the results of her project at the REA circus. Louise has been president of her local club several years and also president of the county 4-H council. She has done outstanding leadership work.

Oralena Robinson, Washington County, has been in 4-H Club work since the age of 10 years, and has completed 17 projects ranging all the way from feeding baby bees to making party dresses. As a home improvement project she arranged a picnic nook with an outdoor fireplace and table. This affords the family and her friends many hours of pleasure. Oralena has been president, vice president, and secretary-treasurer of her local club; president of the county council and editor of the county 4-H paper.

Fern Alder, Kittitas County, has learned many useful things in her 8 years of club work. While her chief interest has been in her clothing project, other projects have been added each year, among them foods, canning, health, and home furnishing. She has given demonstrations and participated in judging at the county fair several years, and exhibited at the State fair. One year she was selected as outstanding girl in her community. For 3 years Fern has been leader of a sewing club.

Dean Lindley, Columbia County, is now completing his eighth year as a club member. He has been particularly interested in live-stock and is building up a fine herd of Shorthorns, in which he has a large part of the profits from his other projects. In 1935 he won a trophy cup as outstanding boy in the county. The next year he was awarded a registered gilt for being the outstanding swine club member. For the past 3 years Dean has acted as assistant leader of the pig club, and has led a garden club. He has been vice president and is now president of the State 4-H Club.

Irving Newhouse, Yakima County, has completed 10 years of work as a 4-H Club member. He has filled many offices in his local club, has been vice president of the State 4-H Club, and president of his college 4-H Club. With two older and two younger brothers, all 4-H members, he has helped to build up a herd of registered Poland China swine and one of Holstein dairy cattle. Irving has used a small part of the whole family project for his 4-H records, as has each of his brothers.

Ann Watzig, Clark County, a club member for 9 years, has completed projects in clothing, foods, garden, poultry, pheasant, canning, and room improvement, and has exhibited at county and State fairs each year. Ann has been leader of a sewing club, made up of high-school girls, for 3 years and has trained winning demonstration and judging teams. Her sewing projects have received a number of awards at both county and State fairs. She has served in all the offices of her local clubs and is secretary of the leaders council.

Sara Besco, Ohio County, in 9 years of 4-H Club work has completed projects in baking, clothing, and nature study. Her 4-H activities have been varied, ranging from demonstrations and judging through folk dancing and choral work. She organized what is now known as the Seminole 4-H Junior Chorus composed of young 4-H Club members. This chorus has a State-wide reputation. Sara is a member and director of a girls' trio which has made appearances at various meetings and on the radio.

Jack Buchanan, Cabell County, is in his eighth year of club experience and his chief interest has been in poultry. He has also been successful in his handicraft and baking projects. Last year at State music camp he was given a full scholarship for the camp this year. Outstanding in his memory are the 4-H exhibit days and the days spent in camp at Jackson's Mill.

Sam Gwinn, Summers County, has done excellent work with his corn and potato projects since he entered the club 8 years ago. For the past 4 years he has been a local leader. Sam has attended 8 county and 6 State camps. He feels these camps are of great value to the boys and girls who attend them. Last year he was selected for the State all-star organization.

Nellene Staub, Berkeley County, feels that her 8 years of experiences and accomplishments in 4-H Club work have done much toward development of her head, hand, heart, and health. She has successfully worked out projects in clothing, baking, food preservation, and health improvement. Nellene has made numerous talks in the State on various phases of 4-H Club activities; helped to make up and distribute gifts to the underprivileged at Christmas; assisted in planting evergreens on the school grounds; exhibited her sewing, canning, and baking projects; and attended State camps. She is a member of the State 4-H chorus.

Elton Broege, Rock County, is in his ninth year of club membership and is now a local leader. Aside from the 37 projects completed by Elton, he has sung over the radio and in the county singing tournament, played violin in the 4-H orchestra, and participated in the county drama tournament. He was president of his local club last year, and has, in various years, acted as chairman of the enrollment, advisory, record-book, fair-entry, and program committees. He has also been prominent in judging and demonstration work.

Frieda Nicolaus, Waukesha County, is doing her best to improve her community through 4-H Club work. She has been a member for 7 years, and in 5 of them served as local leader. The canning, clothing, and foods projects have proved most helpful in everyday farm living. She has helped train other club members for judging and demonstration contests, helped direct local plays, and served as secretary and president of her club.

Harold Niles, Juneau County, began his 4-H Club work as an associate member at the age of 9. He has won recognition as an outstanding leader and has served as local leader for 4 years. He has completed projects in garden, calf, handicraft, and rural electrification. He won first place in showmanship in his county for 4 years. Harold was president of his club last year, and has served on many committees.

Harriet Stanchfield, Fond du Lac, was first enrolled in club work in 1933. During the past 3 years she has been junior leader of a group of 45 young people. She has completed clothing, canning, poultry, home-improvement, dairy, garden, baking, and farm-account projects, and has participated in judging and demonstration activities. She served as secretary and news reporter of her club for 5 years and has also been its president and vice president.

LeNore Bagley, Lincoln County, has completed 12 projects during her 9 years as a 4-H Club member. One year she canned all the fruit, vegetables, and meat used by her family during the summer and winter, and was named State canning champion. She and her sister have given a number of demonstrations as a team, but at home they were rivals in their club work. Last summer LeNore belonged to a club with members her own age, completed two projects, and led two standard second-year food clubs. All the members of both her clubs reported 100-percent completion.

Katie Gillett, Park County, became a club member at the age of nine. She has, as she puts it, "tasted and pinched and looked and wondered through 11 foods judging contests," but in clothing judging she was right at home. She has found demonstrating interesting and helpful because she has to learn the subject thoroughly before she can put it across to others. In 1939 she was named State bread-baking champion. She proved successful as leader of a sewing club by turning out a winning demonstration team.

Charles Middlesworth, Platte County, has been in club work since the age of 10. He raised a baby beef his first year and showed it at the county fair where it won first prize. Since then he has not only been showing his cattle, but has also done considerable livestock judging. Charles has also done crop judging. Through his club work he has gained a practical knowledge of fattening beef cattle for market, of judging and selecting good breeding stock, of fitting and showing animals, and of systematic record keeping.

Lloyd Leon Wilson, Washakie County, has spent 7 years in developing 4-H Club projects. Among them are potato, turkey, baby beef, sheep, and farm accounts. During these years he has learned many of the fine points in raising, training, showing, and judging livestock. Lloyd has served his club several years as president, vice president, and treasurer. He has attended State camp 4 years as a member of the judging team, and has been outstanding in leadership.
